

Most companies treat conferences like expensive networking trips.

Buy booth.

Print banners.

Fly the team out.

Hope pipeline appears.

That is not a strategy.

Meanwhile, their ideal buyers walk a few feet away from them and disappear forever.

The real move is pre-event outbound.

Reach out before the conference.

Book meetings before the conference.

Give buyers a reason to notice you before they walk past your booth.

Because cold outbound alone is hard.

And events alone are unpredictable.

But together?

Now outbound has context.

And the event has intent.

Watch the full video:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iQdNmHKNYlc>

Key takeaway:

Most B2B companies do not fail because the product is terrible.

Usually the market just has not paid enough attention yet.

In the video, I break down:

- why useful B2B products still get ignored
- why outbound works better when attached to trust
- how pre-event outbound changes conference ROI
- why buyers purchase after repeated exposure, not one touchpoint

Best parts:

- 0:09 — “Nobody cares yet” explained
- 2:13 — Why conferences + outbound work together
- 3:15 — The pre-event outbound play
- 4:03 — Why outbound is a force multiplier

Would love your thoughts.

-Akshat Kharbanda

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iQdNmHKNYlc>

BizAmps.com B2B Growth Architects, Sector 22-B, Chandigarh, Chandigarh 160022,
India, +918837821190

Unsubscribe Manage preferences

Send free email today